ORIGIN OF GUY MANNERING.

The novel or romance of Waverly, (says Sir Walter Scott.) made its way to the public slowly, but afterwards, with much accumulating popularity, so as to encourage the author to a second attempt. He looked about for a same andra subject; and the manner in which the novels were composed cannot be hetter illustrated than by recting the simple narrative on which Guy Mannering was originally founded, but to which, in the progress of the work, the production ceased to bear any, even the most distant resemblance. The tale was originally told me by an old servant of my father's, an excellent old Highlander, without a fault, unless a preference to mountain-dew over less potent fiquors be accounted one. He believed as firmly in the story as in any part of his creed. A grave and elderly person, according to old John Mac Kinlay's account, while travelling in the wilder parts of Gailoway, was benighted. With difficulty he found his way to a country seat, where, with the hospitality of the time and country, he was readily admitted. The owner of the house, a gentleman of good fortune, was much struck by the reverend appearance of his guest, and apologised to him for a certain degree of confusion which must unavoidably attend his reception, and could not escape his eye. The lady of the house was, he said, confined to her apartment, and on the point of making her husband a father for the first time, though they had been ten years married. At such an emergency, the laird said he feared his guest might meet with some apparent neglect. "Not so, sir," said the stranger; 'my wants are few and easily supplied, and I trust the present circumstances may even afford an opportunity of showing my gratitude for your hospitality. Let me only request that I may be informed of the exact minute of the birth, and I hope to be able to put you in possession of some particulars which may influence in an important manner the future prospects of the child now about to come into this boxy and changeful world. I will not conc ORIGIN OF GUY MANNERING.

LONDON SIGHTS.

The other sights of London have severely by the appearance of a lady, sow exhibiting in St. James's street, with a beardent inches long. One of the learned cafe, her bear confined to its room through low spirits, and was for two days hardly prevailed upon by the importunity of friends, to lap a little milk and est an oyster. As for the Bohamian brothers, it was reported that they had laid a plan for lathering her chin by surprise, shaving her, and an raining her prospects. The new rape of the lack has not yet taken place, and it is to be hoped that Hoaven will yet shield the innocent object of such nefarious designs. The lady is the only daughter of a Piedmontese gentleman of small fortune but of a great speculative turn. Having observed what a great demand for uncommonplace sights there is in the world, he looked upon his daughter as one of the happiest of women. "In England, Barbarina," he said, as she set out for that country, "you will lire luxuriantly without wear and tear of mind or body, for these people delight in nothing so much as to be made store, and will pay any thing to see a preposterous exhibition. Heaven has kindly made you an object, such as there are few in the world. Remember your mother, your anet, and myself, depend upon your affection and your beard. Fly the addresses of barbers, that our remittances be not cut off." Extract of a letter from the lady:—

My dear Papa—I find every thing here precisely as you told me. My arrival here was luckily timed, for there was not a single female monater to be seen, and that in the height of the season. LEWIS V. TONES.

Lewis v. Toxus.

This was an action upon a bill of ungs for 1007. drawn by one M'Neile, and oted by the defendant.

me fucie case being established for the by the proof of the defendant's hand

ATTORNEY GENERAL said his defen be action was, that the bill was concocted mary. The acceptance was given by his it as an accommodation to M'Noile, and dis desit as an accommodation to M'Neile, and dis-sented by Levy, a Sheriff's office, and the fa-ther of the plaintiff. It would be shown that this Sheriff officer, besides necessionally taking sen's hodies, was also a discounter of bills, but always upon terms most advantageous to him-self. When this bill was presented to him for self. When this bill was presented to him for discusset, he was not content with the usual allowance of five per cent., but said M'Neile must take some silver things—a silver teapot and silver mag, which he valued at 40%. The discounter was also to be paid 20%, so that the whole of the mo my paid over was only 40%. The silver things M'Neile afterwards piedged at a pawnheuter's for 15%, and he was told that the value of them was under 30%. The bill then was passed into the hands of Lewis, who was Levy's son, and who, it would perhaps be shown, had given full consideration for it. The Jury were aware that a party who had himself been guilty of mary with respect to a bill, could not maintain an action upon it, and to avoid that it was passed into the hands of a party who had given value for it. It would be for the Jury to see how that consideration was proved.

value for it. It would be for the Jury to see how that consideration was proved.

Mr. M'Neile, the drawer of the bill, was then called. He said it was a meffe accommodation acceptance by the defundant, and who had received no value for it. Witness presented it for discount to Levy, who gave him 40t. in cash, a silver tan-cervice, which he valued at 40t. more, and 30t. were to be deducted. This was all he over received. The tea-port, jug. and basin he pledged for 15t, but the pawnbroker offered him 15t. if he would sell them. These things were now in pawn. The pawnbroker was Howe, of ow in pawn. The pawnbroker was Howe, of

There has been no dividend as yet. Mrs. or Miss Levy was present when I took the silver things; one of them fatched them. I had a brooch of Mr. Levy, but that was some years ago, and has nothing to do with this caso. It has also been partly paid for. It was given in a discount of a bill. He was paid 314. 10s. in part of the bracch; I did not borrow, but bought if of him. Re-examined—I carried on business at the Berners'-street-end of Oxford street. Maurice Levy said he was a son of Levy, and a half-brother of the plaintiff. He saw this bill first in M'Neile's hands. He was present at the transaction between Levy and M'Neile, but did not recollect exactly the nature of it. It came to the plaintiffs hands some days before it became due. Levy told him to go and ask the money of Lewis, who is a householder, and a married man. Lewis gave me for it eighty pounds in notes, and twenty pounds in sovereigns. He was a bankrupt, but I cannot say how long ago. My father gave him no assistance to set up again. Had known him discount bills sometimes. He set up again in business immediately after his bankruptcy. His father recommends Lewis to business, and other attorneys likewise. Knew nothing of the state of accounts between his father and Lewis. He had lived ten years in Newman-street.

nied that this was the hand-writing of the de it lay upon him to show, to the satisfaction of the Jury, that there was something to discharge him from the payment of it. He said there was summy. Usury, as a defence, ought certainly not to be allowed by law—but, as it was allowed.

The evening's electrisments to conclude with, time in the city, the Comic Vandeville, in two by literace and Meleaville, called Tonne, or, Fire Versian in Theo Hour. to be allowed by law—but, as it was allowed, Juries required that the facts should be proved by witnesses beyond all suspicion. Who was the witness to prove it? M'Neile, who came from the King's Bench prison, and who was a bankrupt, and who had not yet passed his last examination. He took care to mention times when nobody was present—when he could not be contradicted. As to what was stated about the sugar-tongs and individual stated about the sugar-tongs and individual depended on the value of those articles. But supposing usury were proved, the law was this, that unless the plaintiff, the indormer of the bill, was privy to the usury, and knew of the bill, was privy to the usury, and knew it was committed, he was not at all affected by
it. If the Jury believed that Lewis gave money to Levy before the bill was due, and had no notice of usury, he was entitled to a verdict.
Lord Travraners said that there were two questions for the consideration of the Jury; first, on what terms Levy got the bill of M'Nosie.—

on what terms Levy got the bill of M'Noile.—
If M'Noile were to be believed, he got it on such terms as that be could not have sued. Next, if Levy could not have sued, did the Jury think that the plaintiff was a real and bean fide holder? There was little doubt that Levy, the Sheriff's officer, discounted the bill. The story told to make the plaintiff a bean fide holder of the bill, upon fall consideration, was, that a few hours before the bill became due, Levy sent his and to the plaintiff with this bill. He told him to said Levy to give money for it. The son took the bill, and Lewis gave the fall sum, 50% or bill, and Lowis gave the full sum, 80%. to in Bank notes, and the remainder thereaboute, in Bank notes, and the remainder in covereigns. The question was, was this a real and genuine transaction between Lewis and Levy, or was it merely colourable? If the Jury thought that the money only passed to be re-turned, they would give a verdict for the de-featest.

The Jury returned a verdict for the defendant

PHILADELPHA:

WEDNESDAY EVENING, SEPT. 9, 1829

The annexed statement, sent by a cor respondent, relates to an institution, than which, according to our observation, few have been regarded with more cordial and unanimous favour in this community. We insert it with a sincere wish that it may assist in attracting effective support to a most interesting and valuable charity:-

The attention of the public is invited to the following statement of facts, relative to the Infant School Society of the city of Philadelphia. This society was organized in May, 1827—since that period three schools for white, and one for olored children, have been opened, and are now under its care. Feveral hundred infants are daily resumed to be unnecessary, at this time, to lessant on the merits of this charity. A visit to these schools, and an examination of the sys-tem of instruction there adopted, will not fail to recommend it to the patronage of those who desire to see a moral thinking people rising around them.

The annual expense of each school is not less for the support of the colored school, which is entirely distinct from the general fund, . . . ICS 00

This total of nine hundred twenty-sever dollars forty-right cents, presents the state of the funds of this interesting Institution. A few legacies have been left to this society, which, it be regretted, have caused saveral individu als to withdraw their support. It is but just to kindly remembered this Institution, is to be en joyed in future. The monies thus bequeather are no present emolument. It is therefore respectfully urged upon this community to take the subject of Infant Education in ings into serious consideration, which it is beschools. Subscriptions and donations are re spectfully solicited. Treasurer's residence. No 357 Market street.

The location of the schools is as follows School No. 1, 15th street, near Vine; sebool No. 2, College Avenue, 10th street, above Chemut street.— Visitors admitted on Tuesday and Friday mornings. School No. 3, Spruce street, No. 20; colored school, Gashill street, No. 60. Visitors admitted on Wednes-

ARCH STREET THEATRE. Ambrose Gwinett, as performed at this of Melo-Dramas which the manager of a The-atre can deserve credit for producing. I was thoroughly bored with entertainments of this sort during the summer season at another es-tablishment, that I had made up my mind never to witness another, at least till I could forgat those that had already so sickened me. There, to be sure, they were so vilely played that the best would have been bad; the chief parts being generally given to actors whose only percepti ble qualification was their utter unfitness for any thing else. If their talents did not lie in Melo-Drama, where-as Johnny McCris sayswhere the deil did they list

The interest of Ambrese Gwinett is intense and prever how strongly a dramatist even with out strict adherance to nature in his characters may arrest the feelings by skill in the choice o situations and a knowledge of stage effect.— Without these, indeed, his play, though every line may bear the stamp of talent, is not fit for the stage.

The ectors received unbounded applause; and certainly the performances were of a very differ-ent order from those I have alleded to a few lines above. As the unfortunate though innocent Ambrese, ARCHER appeared perhaps to greater advantage than in any thing also he has yet given us. Though struck by his talent, I uld, however, have approved him still more, had be exerted himself less, and not strained his roice quite so much as he did on certain occa-

ANDREWS, though he holds rank in the company as a low comedian, showed, by his performance of Grayling, that, like the famous EMERY, he possesses powers far superior to those required for the mere Yorkshire clodpole. His performance, throughout, seemed to make a deep impression on the audience. He must be careful in avoiding the crying sin of the stage; a propensity to over-acting—to extravagant vio-lence of both limbs and lungs. I say this not to detract from his morit, but as a friendly caution intended for his benefit.

I. Fiskun, who, I understand, is the brothe of our little favourite Clara, made what is called a lucky hit in Label. I like this actor both for is own comic talent, which is remarkable, and for his strong resemblance, in action and manner, to one whom he never could have seen mean my old favourite, HARWOOD; whose sur passing excellence was unrivalled while he lived and who, though long since dead, has been followed by no successor of equal worth. There s, in Fishen's action, a neatness and expres ion which assist his meaning wonderfully, and which it is not easy to describe; a certain lively and clean motion of the hand-if I may so call it-that very few actors acquire. In these graces of action, as well as in the intellectual gifts seential to a perfect comedian, HARWOOD was far before every competitor; but I feel sure that they who used to admire him will like FISHER.

'Grace of action in a low comedian! who ever saw such a thing?' may be the exclamation o some unfledged critic.—Not you, certainly, my young friend; for it has seldom appeared on our tage since HARWOOD's last inimitable personation of Walter, in the Children of the Wood Nor do I expect to see it in Johann or Crack. But the range of comedy includes many parts as different from these as from Belcour an tio. In the hands of such an actor as W. CHAP-MAN, they are all vulger alike; and the delight of his sable auditors in the gallery is heightened by their consciousness of the superiority of their own appearance and demeanour. Consequently their plaudits are freely bestowed, the actor becomes their hero, and their approbation will which fact was known at St. Michaels. doubtless console him for the opinion of those who think that low comedy may be too low.

Our old friend ROBERTS never played better in his life than as Gilbert; and this is no slight

Bolt, the Jailer, I am convinced, never awad more to any man who carried his keys than to TUTRILL. I did not think that so much tenderness and feeling harboured in the breast of this sturdy Irishman. My reputation as a critic must suffer, I know, by praising any but those whose names stand at the head of the bill .-But I must have my humour, at all risks. George the Smuggler was not disgraced by Stevenson, nor were Blackthorn, Will Ash, or Collins, by

I shall not undertake to decide on Mus Young, till I have become more accustomed to her style. I think a little less violence would have comported well with the character of Lucy. Family Jars was the afterpiece on Friday. Delph is one of ROBERTS's best things, and he played it capitally: The character is very di verting, and he made every scene and passage Annaus did great justice to the Aundutell. tiful son, and was loudly applauded for his song of the Peachers. MRs. VERNON's performance of the simple, garrulous Liddy, was highly relished as it deserved to be. This lady, I think will prove a great acquisition.

A Lisbon date of the 11th of July, announces the arrival there of Mr. Pinto, commanding the battalion of the 1st infantry of the line in garrison in the island of St. Michael.

"On the festival of the Corpus Christi, a kind of conflict took place between the different seperior officers who have command in the island. Each claimed to command for that day the parade and the escort of the procession; and either in consequence of this misunderstanding, or what is more probable, of a previous bad disposition of the troops, the fact is, that noither the troops would obey their superior officers, who successively came forward to take the command. Mr. Acquabena, an Itelian courier, arrived at the Colonial Office late last night, with despatches from Sir Frederick Adam, the Lord High Commissioner of the Ionian Isles, to Sir Geo. Murray. He was also the bearer of despatches from the Hon. R. Gordon, at Constantinople, to Mr. Dawkins, the British Consul General, and also to Lord Aberdeen. Mr. Gordon's despatches, we sederstand, are dated the 90th of June; they coatain a similar account of the satisfactory manner in which he was received at Constantinople, as we have already received through other channels. At that time he had not had an audience with the Sultan, although it was daily expected; nor had the negociations been opened. The communications from Mr. Dawkins are to the 4th inst. and are, for the most part, confined to the details of the steps recently taken by the President of Greece, and which have been already before the public. The messenger left Ascess on the 22d inst.

The two Brasilian frigates arrived at Portsmenth, the Impatrice and Isabel, the former under the command of Capt. Paitx, and the latter of Capt. Norton is an Englishman, and well known in the East India Company's wrive, and who is said to have greatly distributed to him to the rank of Commodore. In almost the last action he lost an arm, and was otherwise severely wounded. Vice Admiral Ls Conde de Souzell has his flag on board the Impatrice, which brought the Queen of Portugal to this country, and which, it is said, will convey the future Empress of Brazil to Rio J

We have this moment received Lisbon mails we have this moment received Libon mails of the 12th and 19th inst., but their contents are scarcely worthy of notice, except it be to show that the system of herrible tyranny and confiscation is still pursued by the Miguelite party against all those who have the misfortune to possess property, and are even suspected of being favorable to the constitutional principles. How nearly dees this dreadful state of things in Portugal, under what has been dignified by some English journalists as a "Legitimate Government," resemble the state of anarchy during the worst days of the French revolution; when it was sufficient that a man who possessed property should be marked down for proscription and banishment. Yet the present Portuguess government has been virtually recognised by the English Ministry as a government worthy of friendly alliance with this country.—British Traveller.

A duel took place last week upon the ramparts of Dijon, near which run the housea of the inhabitants, between a citizen and an officer—they fought with pistols. Having thrown up a crown for the first fire, fortune favored the citizen, who fired and missed. The officer, knowing he was the aggressor, fired in the air, and the ball killed the wife of his adversary, who, on hearing the noise of the first shot, had run to her window. The grief of the officer may be well conceived, when he found, in his endeavour to avoid a murder, he had killed the wife of the man to whom he was willing to make reparation.—French paper.

LECTURES ON BOOK-KEEPING.

C. MARSH will deliver a course of Four

Lectures, in which he will elucidate the principles and practice of Book-keeping, in a manner so simplifying, that persons entirely universed in the art will be fully qualified to prosecute the study, at their leisure with perfect success.

All persons partially acquainted with accounts, by attending a course of these lectures, will receive a critical knowledge of Book-keeping, founded on irrefutable principles.—Those difficulties in which the study of Book-keeping has generally been involved, will be cautively dissipated, by the introduction of an infallible role, sever yet published.

The course of Four Lectures will embrace an examination of the subject under the following heads: lat. The science of Book-keeping, its foundation and objects.

objects.

2. The opening of accounts, individual and partner opening of the same. In the accounts, and the reopening of the same above twelve divisions of the subject, an extensive variety of commercial transactions will be investigated and resolved, the invariable application of the "infallible rule" fully exhibited, and its unfaling sepacity in producing the most judicious results, even in the most complicated concerns, proved to the perfect satisfaction of every enquirer on the important Science of Book-keeping.

The Finar LECTURE of the course will be delivered at G. W. Helsenbake's Academical Room, No. 130
